

For the Logo: Our Core Values include:

- Collaboration
- Trust/Authenticity/Vulnerability
- Connection
- Community/Support
- Genuine/Intimate Conversations
- Meeting in-person is chance to connect and learn (grounded)

TESTIMONIALS

*I've really enjoyed attending TABLE. It creates a rare space where founders can openly share what's weighing on them and receive thoughtful perspectives from peers and advisors in the startup community. The conversations are candid, practical and grounding. I also value the organizers' sincerity and their skill in guiding meaningful conversations. I would highly recommend it to any founder looking for clarity, connection, and real-time insight. Diane Peng

As a new entrepreneur who avoided the idea of being one for most of my life, I have always taken every opportunity I can to learn more about business, entrepreneurship, Part of this learning journey has come from attending the monthly Table sessions, where I have become a "seasoned" attendee Due to the structure of Table of having the attendees form the questions, each session is always new and exciting and brings up topics I would have never thought about if you are an entrepreneur at any stage, you would benefit from attending these sessions.

Shay Bouchles

*My experience with Table started with wanting to find a space to learn about building a startup- but I ended up finding community, mentors and friends who have helped guide me in the last year. No Table event has been the same, and the insights gained from an amalgam of people has been so valuable. As a founder, I believe others will find these 9am sessions to be extremely impactful. Mamadou Cisse

Table Origin Story

In 2018, Geoff Scott started something simple: a free, monthly morning gathering in NYC called Startup Lean Coffee. The idea was borrowed from the Lean Coffee™ format — a lightly facilitated but agenda-less meeting where participants show up, propose topics, vote, and talk. No keynote speakers. No pitch decks. Just founders, investors, operators, advisors and executives sitting around tables having genuine, raw conversations about the things that actually keep them up at night.

The conversations have spanned fundraising, product-market fit, go-to-market strategy, AI, co-founder conflict, hiring, pivots, and everything in between. More importantly, the relationships formed around those tables have led to real outcomes, members have become co-founders, grown their teams with key hires, and found valuable resources and built lasting friendships. In 2025, Benjamin Friedman and Karina Muller joined as co-organizers to grow and formalize our community, which now includes over 1,200 founders, advisors, and investors. It was clear that "Startup Lean Coffee" no longer captured what this had become. It wasn't just about startups. It wasn't just about coffee. It was about what happens when you pull up a chair, bring a real question, and trust the people around you to help you think it through. So we gave it the name it deserved: Table.

Today, Table meets every month in NYC. We're adding new events and expanding to new cities. Our events bring together a growing network of builders, operators, and investors who believe that the best insights come from honest conversation — not polished presentations.

There's always a seat for you at Table.

AHA MOMENTS

- Using AI is a skill
- Ensure proper legal set up of Corp
- Crunch Base for research, who is writing checks and who is receiving it
- Fundraising is a full time job
- Using Claude with MCP
- Niche selling, focusing on smaller groups
- Attending Events to make contacts
- Fundraising warm intros are the best
- Be open for guidance, advice and mentorship
- Genuine story telling
- AI could be an opportunity
- Offer value when trying to get someone's attention
- Empathy over persuasion
- Communication is key with your team
- Strong advisors and mentors are key to a founders success